

General Counsel (GC)

In the role of General Counsel (GC), implementing and maintaining transparent operations with effective and efficient processes is imperative to having a clear picture. When you add the growing surge of privacy and compliance regulations that impact how sensitive legal documents are managed, the pressure to manage information carefully to avoid risk and ensure productivity is significant, and increasing.

In the past decade, law departments have taken on important new risk and business decision-making functions as their businesses have rapidly evolved into collaborative, extended enterprises with geographical variation. With the increase in collaboration with outside counsel, regulatory compliance is a growing issue with regard to document management and governance. Adding to that burden is intensifying global competition, which is driving increased specialization; this trend is causing companies to collaborate with an ecosystem of partners to achieve holistic, competitive solutions. Additionally, IP litigation is becoming a more widespread need of clients.

Intralinks can help

We help corporate legal teams diminish the risk associated with document management and governance over activities such as managing contracts, board communications, regulatory filings, intellectual property, litigation, HR matters and collaboration with outside counsel. We provide corporate legal departments with the ability to easily manage critical information across their extended teams by providing a secure, controlled and auditable cloud-based repository for the management and exchange of legal content.

For the Legal Department

Intralinks supports five key functions for corporate legal teams:

1. Corporate repository and document exchange
2. Regulatory and audit reporting
3. Board reporting
4. Legal extranet
5. Contract management

Using Intralinks' web-based collaboration workspaces, secure file transfer, and mobile file sharing capabilities, legal content can be securely shared, and made selectively available to whoever needs it, whenever they need it, wherever they are.

What could this look like in your law department?

Intralinks' repositories allow real-time monitoring of user activity, which helps manage the complexity resulting from global litigation management. Instead of synthesizing reports from legal parties across the country or around the globe, legal parties can review updates in a single repository. With Intralinks, they can monitor who is viewing what documents, why they are doing so, and the result of such access.

Additionally, they can also transparently review the quality of the work – without bringing it to the attention of the other parties. This type of clarity and visibility into the work product of outside counsel and other collaborators allows GCs to measure law firm performance against fundamental metrics such as efficiency, value and cost-savings.
